ICE IS FOOLER

Ice is a real fooler.

Did you know ice is slipperier when the temperature is just below freezing than it is at zero degrees?

You can prove it yourself by holding an ice cube in your hand. At first, it's sticky, but the longer you hold it the more slippery it becomes.

So when you're out walking and there's ice under foot, take it easy and watch your step. The Virginia Rural Safety Council reminds you a slip or a trip can berak a hip.

TOO WARM FOR DUCKS

Waterfowl gunners, especially duck hunters, are beginning to worry about the warm weather conditions which have lasted so late in November. During the last two or three winters, relatively warm weather prevailed and Virginia gunners did not get the usual duck population. They are now fearing that the same conditions may prevail this year, according to C. F. Phelps, the chief of the Game Division of the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries.

YOUNG FRUIT TREES MAY NEED ATTENTION AS RESULT OF DAMAGE

Young fruit trees in some sections of the state took a real beating during the heavy rainfall and high winds last month — and some attention may be in order.

That's the tip from A. H. Teske horticulturist at VPI. He says under normal seasonal moisture conditions young trees would not have been affected by the recent high winds, but in most fruit growing areas, two or more hours of rainfall preceded the wind. This soften ed up the ground and when the wind did come it caused the trees to sway and openings were made in the soil around the trunks.

In many cases the dirt was not only pushed back away from th trunks of the trees, leaving openings up to several inches, but the openings were deep. There was considerable root breakage, although the trees may now be standing in their original upright position. If these openings are not filled with dirt and water collects in them low temperature can cause serious damage and even permanent injury to the crown and roots.

Teske advises fruit growers tc examine all trees for such openings and fill them with loose dirt. Tamp the dirt in tightly with a tamper. Where the openings are deep, loosen the soil around the top and to a depth that will make it possible to get the dirt packed tightly in the bottom of the openings and around exposed roots. Add enough dirt to make a mound around the trunks four to five inches above the level of the ground. If there is evidence of root breakage, the trees should be staked and braced. Do not apply any fertilizer this fall.

To help avoid injury from mice remove all grass and weeds from around the trunks of the trees to a distance of 18 inches. This is not a control for mice, but a partial insurance against serious girdling of the trunks.

VIRGINIA PRICE OUTLOOK FOR 1955 VEGETABLES

Lower prices for most vegetables are in the offing for 1955 in Virginia, say economists at VPI.

There are some exceptions in the forecast. Some improvement is predicted in cabbage prices in early and late marketing periods when the main crop is not moving. Kale acreage for 1955 in Virginia appears to be reduced and prices should be more satisfactory this winter and in the early spring than in 1954. Once the storage deal for early potatoes is underway, prices should be satisfactory, and growers should do well with potatoes sold before June 20. Short supplies of Porto Rico sweet potatoes in storage from the 1954 crop likely will result in higher prices for late spring and early summer sales.

Expected to drop somewhat are prices for asparagus, lima beans, cucumbers, sweet corn, new crop onions, peppers, and watermelons.

Tomato cannery supplies do not appear to be excessive. The fresh market should be good in 1955 until supplies become heavy. Try for the early and late markets to avoid the low prices expected during the main crop movement.

ENTHUSIAM GROWS FOR HUNTING

Enthusiasm for hunting and the tremendous numbers of gunners who have taken to the woods, fields and marshes during the 1954 seasons point up the great importance of the recreation of hunting to the Virginia people. The Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries fully realizes its grave responsibility in looking after the natural resources upon which hunting depends.

When the long-range game program was adopted in 1948, it was realized that the general public could be brought to fuller conception of the value of wildlife assets, and therefore could be counted upon to cooperate in the Commission's efforts. It is truly remarkable how citizens, individually and in groups, have put their shoulders to the wheel and have helped in many ways.

That there is a long way yet to go is fully realized, but the Commission, with the aid of an interested public, is determined to develop the wildlife resources of the state to their fullest potentials. Education of the general public in the things the game managers are striving to do has an important part in the overall program and will continue to be.

Particularly in the field of habitat improvement for upland game on private lands, visual demonstrations have been highly effective. There is hardly a farmer anywhere in the state who is not within easy reach of a model demonstration of plantings and other practices which he may apply on his own place. The number of farmers who are profiting from these demonstrational a reas are growing steadily.

From the outset, the Commission has been furnishing seeds and other materials free for the asking and the landowners have been taking advantage of this service in annually increasing numbers.The more the value of game is appreciated the easier it will be for the land owners in general to be induced to improve the habitat on their places

As far as upland small game is concerned, it is apparent to everybody that there can be greater abundance anywhere that efforts are being made to restore habitat which has been destroyed through vastly changed agricultural practices in recent years.

A strong point in the habitat improvement program for farm game is that most of the things which save money for the landowners, check erosion of their soils and add to the annual incomes from farms while also addfing materially to the value of these places.

Perhaps there is more active cooperation in habitat improvement for upland game on the part of the general public than in any other field; but citizens are being helpful in a number of other ways. There are notable improvements in the help which citizens are giving the law enforcement officers in their efforts to stem the tide of lawlessness.

When the Commission of Game and Inland Fisheries adopted the current long-range program 6 years ago, it was a basic objective to keep the public fully and frankly informed of the various steps being taken. In the meantime every effort has been made to strengthen each division of the administrative agency.

It was realized at the outset that there was no possible way of filling the woods and fields with game over night. But current efforts under the long-range program are showing that the average overall abundance of game in Virginia can be brought to much higher levels and kept at high levels.

FARM CENSUS

The 1954 Census of Agriculture is about 50 per cent completed in the forty-two counties covered by the field office at Richmond, Virginia, according to Field Supervisor Walter G. Andrews, Jr.

Mr. Andrews stated that he was well pleased with the cooperation the census enumerators are receiving from farmers in this area and has high hopes of completing the canvas by the scheduled closing date of December 13, 1954.

He pointed out that enumeration of farms is one of the larger costs of the census and that cooperation of farmers in completing questionnaires promptly will be a vital factor in keeping down the final cost of the undertaking.

Quick completion of the census will not only help in keeping costs down but will aid in prompt publication of the results.

TAX DEADLINE

December 5 is the deadline for payment of county taxes o avoid penalty.

Cook Books AND CHECK BOOKS

A cook book helps the thrifty housewife to transform odds and ends of food into tasty dishes. A check book, through the record it provides, helps in the financial management of the family's funds.

Yes, in most homes, the check book is just as important as the cook book—or more so. You are invited to carry your Checking Account at this bank.
